

Film's Little Questions

Out on that first date? At a loss for a way to fill up those long silent moments? Try asking your date some of these questions. After all, if they can't talk about movies there is probably no future in the relationship anyway. Better to find out now before you get too attached.

The movie that I saw most recently (and loved) _____
The movie that I saw most recently (and hated) _____
A movie that was most like my life _____
A movie I would want to own the soundtrack for _____
The best movie ever made _____
A movie that takes my breath away _____
A movie I would stand in line to see _____
A movie I can watch again and again _____
The funniest movie I have ever seen _____
The saddest movie I have ever seen _____
The most romantic movie I have ever seen _____
The most action packed movie I have ever seen _____
A movie that I would like to star in _____
A movie I would like to direct _____
A movie I would like to do the special effects for _____
A movie I would never take children to see _____
A movie that kept me awake all night _____
A movie that never should have been made _____
A movie that put me to sleep _____
A movie I would take all of my friends to see _____
A movie that I remember from my childhood _____
A movie that reminded me of school _____
A movie that reminded me of my childhood _____
A movie that I was absolutely dragged to _____
A movie that I want to see as soon as possible _____
A movie that had the best lines _____
A movie that did not live up to my expectations _____
A movie that exceeded my expectations _____
A movie that I regret having seen _____

Name:	Student Number:
--------------	------------------------